

Cass Yee

Closing in on my third year working for IFS Growth, fresh out of university, and my knowledge and experience has more than doubled from the first day walking into the Invercargill office. I have gone from being mistaken as my supervisors daughter, working with 'dad' for the school holidays, to solely managing a planting crew in a space of 12 months. This really highlights the rapid growth in my confidence, experience and knowledge which I have gained through the graduate position.

The small team environment at IFS Growth provides many opportunities to get involved in every aspect of the forestry industry, helping out colleagues in various tasks such as harvest planning, environmental requirements, health and safety and silviculture. There is even the opportunity to give back some knowledge as the new age technology of smart phones, computers and drone can often cause some serious headaches around the office.

